Dear Mr Dobbie

In agreement with Mr Kirkbride I am responding to this e-mail as solicitor of conduct with this matter. As discussed previously you are eligible for legal representation and I more than happy to provide you with a list of solicitors practicing in Children Act matters in this area if that at all assists. As I am the solicitor the Local Authority I am afraid it is therefore not appropriate for me to advise any other party including yourself. However, if you do require legal advice regarding the order made yesterday and or Family Procedure Rules 2010, Part 12, Chapter 7, you should instruct a solicitor.

I must emphasise that if you wittingly or unwittingly breach the order made yesterday the Local Authority will be applying to the Court to have you committed to prison.

I received your e-mail yesterday within which you state that: 'The old website content has been removed.' I understand from your conversation this morning with Kevin Buck, team manager, that you have made efforts yourself in this regard, but the website can still be accessed as it has not been disabled by the service provider, in this instance presumably Google. I would be grateful for confirmation that you will be contacting Google or the administrator of the site today to request that they disable the page forthwith.

Please do revert to me if you would be assisted by a list of solicitors who can advise you.

Kind regards

Debbie Williams

Hi Mr Kirkbride, I've added Barnardos, NSPCC, Childline, CAFCASS and Social Services to the list.

Now, in line with my gagging order, please inform the usual suspects that I intend to create a Parliamentary Petition.

I also assume that the following are people that I am allowed to discuss things with without restrictions :-

1. The Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister.
2. The Home Secretary.
3. The leader of the opposition.
4. The shadow home secretary.
5. Any elected and serving MP.
6. Any member of the house of Lords.
7. The Police, as the police.
8. The Police Professional Standards.
9. The IPCC.
10. Offsted.
11. LGO.
12. My medical team.
13. CSA.
14. HMCE.
15. My private and company banks.
16. Barnardos.
17. NSPCC.
18. Childline.
19. CAFCASS.
20. Social Services.

If any of these are not allowed, please contact me and inform which.

Best regards,
Tom Dobbie
